

NAMUN'21

IOC

Tension ran high on the 3rd day. Was the stress of the MUN conference finally catching up to the delegates? Who knows? Delegates worked through blood and sweat on this day to finish the resolution papers, going as far as giving up their lunch break to finish early. And it paid off. I am proud to announce that by the end of the 10th session, the IOC Committee finished not only both resolution papers but also combined them. However, the delegates did not spend the 11th session resting, they still had some fight in them. Upon the insistence of multiple delegates, the IOC Committee decided to finish their GSL. After GSL, there really wasn't anything left to do. Unless... FUN SESSION! Delegates played games and read gossips in the remaining time.

An interview with the delegate of Sri Lanka:

Q: So, what part of NAMUN do you think needs improving?

A: I think the sessions were too long, so were the coffee breaks. Maybe, if they were shorter it would have been better.

Q: I see. What was your most interesting moment at the MUNs you've been to so far?

A: It was yesterday, actually. Somebody unmuted themselves and burped during the social.

Q: That does sound interesting. Do you recommend MUNs to high school students?

A: Yes, definitely. MUNs improved my English and I made many new friends.

Q: I'm glad to hear that. But now it's time
